Leather Quality

While it was once easy to spot a genuine leather item due to the characteristics of the material, it is becoming harder and harder for consumers to distinguish between the real thing and the fakes.

This is largely due to the unscrupulous efforts of devious marketers who tend to market products that are made from synthetic materials.

Here's a trick, try bending the leather item to see how it reacts. If it starts wrinkling up at the bend and changes color, then it's the real thing. But if it just stays uniform after you've bent it or gives you a hard time, then it's most probably fake!

At Walletsplus, we are hawk-eyed vigilant and observant in regard to using only the best Chrome free Vegetable tanned leathers for our products.
